The News' Briefs

Fair will feature organizations

A chance for students to become acquainted with the different religious, academic, service and cultural organizations the University has to offer will take place today in the Union Ballroom from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Deb Helm, Student Life administrative assistant, said the Student Organization fair will feature booths set up to answer questions about how to join, what is involved and about meeting times.

Helm also said more than 100 student organizations will be recruiting new members.

Some of the organizations are providing the chance to witness what the group has to offer first hand.

"Spotlight shows are going to be on display every 15 minutes by different groups," Helm said. "There will be slide shows, musical performances, panel discussions, games and much more."

Throughout the afternoon, prizes such as T-shirts and sweatshirts donated by the organizations will be raffled.

Helm said there is also a grand prize that will be given away. She said students will have to attend the fair to find out more.

Jill Elliott, president of the University Activities Organization, said she would like "lots and lots of people" to come and check it out.

Jumper was attempting suicide

COLUMBUS -- The man who jumped seven floors at Ohio State University's main library was attempting suicide, campus police Chief Ron Michalec said.

Michalec said the ruling was based on interviews with people who knew Mark Mason. He said officials did not know why the 20-year-old was despondent.

Mason jumped from the 11th floor of the library on Sunday and landed on the glass ceiling of the fourth floor of another part of the building. Both of his legs were fractured in the fall, officials at Ohio State University Medical Center said.

He was in fair condition today.

Firefighters worked for about an hour with sledgehammers and drills to remove part of a wall to reach Mason, Battalion Chief C.H. Bardocz said.

Mason is not a student or employee at Ohio State, he said.

Police investigate Tupac shooting

LAS VEGAS -- A record executive who was with Tupac Shakur when the rapper was shot in a drive-by shooting never showed up Tuesday to meet with police investigators.

"We have nothing," Las Vegas Metro Police spokesman Greg McCurdy said when asked about suspects.

Shakur, 25, was on life support and in critical condition Tuesday afternoon. His right lung had been removed during surgery.

The two were heading to a nightclub after watching Mike Tyson knock out Bruce Seldon in a championship fight.

Institute to host Holocaust films

Maureen Barry
The BG News

The Institute for the Study of Culture and Society is a new organization which seeks to provide support for scholars and artists in residence, chosen from the BGSU faculty, according to Vivian Patraka, ICS director.

"ICS is dedicated to promote scholarly and creative projects in the arts and humanities, where external sources of funding are increasingly limited, as well as in related areas of humanistic inquiry in the social sciences and education," Patraka said.

"The Institute sponsors conferences, interdisciplinary seminar activities, outside speakers and ongoing conversations at the Institute about faculty research," Patraka said.

She also said the events are open to students, faculty, and the larger community.

Two film presentations discussing the Holocaust and Jewish and German relationships will be sponsored by ICS, the Fine Arts Center Galleries, and German, Russian and East Asian Languages (GREAL). The film presentations are being held in conjunction with an art exhibition entitled "Perpetrators by Sid Chafetz" in the Willard Wankelman Gallery, according to Jacqueline Nathan, exhibition program administrator.

The Perpetrators exhibit will be displayed in the Fine Arts Center until September 18.

Nathan said these presentations and the exhibition will help clarify the issues and ideas the exhibition raises.

"The films talk about individual parts people played in the Holocaust. Ordinary people made it happen. They were industrialists, teachers, scientists -- it wasn't a group of terrible people," Nathan said.

While the first film, "The Wannsee Conference," discusses the Holocaust, the second film, "Intervals of Silence: Being Jewish in Germany," talks about being Jewish in Germany today, Nathan said.

"The Wannsee Conference" and "Intervals of Silence: Being Jewish in Germany" will be shown Sept. 12 and Sept. 17 respectively.

Both films will be presented in the Wankelman Gallery beginning at 7 p.m.

The gallery hours are 10-4 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 2-5 p.m. Sunday.

Accused stabber may face penalty of death

Jack Buehrer and Brandon Wray
The BG News

The Wood County Grand Jury decided Tuesday morning to have Craig M. Baker, of Fostoria, answer to charges of murder with the possible penalty of death.

Earlier Tuesday, the Wood County Grand Jury turned in a true bill of indictment against Baker, 19, with a death penalty specification. Baker is charged with aggravated murder, two counts of aggravated burglary, and one count of felonious assault.

Wood County Prosecutor Alan Mayberry said the Grand Jury deliberated the evidence for about 45 minutes.

The Grand Jury heard testimony from Julie Kane's neighbors, Tara Fahringer and Bowling Green police officer, Alan Carsey, who apprehended Baker.

A motive has yet to be established, which was no surprise to Mayberry.

"It's a struggle trying to attach reason with something that is so unreasonable," he said. "And that seems to be the case here."

Police say Baker walked into the Mourning Dove Lane home of Kane and Fahringer Saturday and stabbed Kane in the neck and sliced Fahringer across the face.

According to police reports, Kane was on the phone with the 911 dispatcher while she was stabbed.

Baker will be arraigned in Judge Gale Williamson's courtroom at 9 a.m. Monday.

Mayberry said a bond hearing will take place in Williamson's court at 9 a.m. today in the case against Baker. Bond is currently set at $100,000, but Mayberry hopes to see bond raised or removed.

Chief Galen Ash said the Bowling Green police are very happy the prosecutor's office will seek the death penalty.

"The death penalty is definitely appropriate in this case," Ash said. "The easy part is done now with the indictment; now the burden is on us and the prosecutor to gather the evidence and get all the information possible for the case."

The Kane case is the first murder in Bowling Green since the abduction and murder of three-year-old Alex Leimgruber in 1992. John Umbel, Leimgruber's killer, avoided the death penalty only because of his history of mental illness. He is currently serving a life prison sentence.

Ash said the Leimgruber case was the most hideous he has seen in over 35 years on the force. Ash also said that the Kane case has been a very emotional one for the

The Baker File

The Prosecution Says:

Mayberry

On the night of Sept. 7, Craig Baker entered the house of Julie Kane and Tara Fahringer, 911 Mourning Dove Lane, stabbing and killing Kane and slashing Fahringer's face with a black paring knife.

Bowling Green police Officer Alan Carsey apprehended Baker near the intersection of South College Drive and Eighth Street.

What Craig Baker faces:

If convicted of the charges of aggravated murder, aggravated burglary and felonious assault, Craig Baker could be sent to Ohio's electric chair.

A jury will first decide Baker's guilt or innocence on the charges, and if they return a verdict of guilty, will decide whether he shall spend life in prison or be sent to the electric chair.

Unanswered Questions:

- Police have yet to release an established motive for the Saturday evening slaying.

- As of press time, Baker did not have a lawyer, as Wood County's public defender cannot defend alone in a death penalty case.

- When the trial will begin in Wood County Common Pleas Court, Judge Gale Williamson presiding.

department, adding that emotions have been high among the officers.

Bowling Green will provide a police escort at Kane's funeral, according to Ash.

Baker's trial is the fourth since 1989 in which the prosecutor's office has requested the death penalty.

Senate in favor of "traditional family"

Cassandra Burrell
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON -- The Senate gave final congressional approval today to a bill that would deny federal recognition of same-sex marriages and let states refuse to sanction such unions licensed in other states. In a separate vote the Senate rejected a bill outlawing job discrimination against gays.

The anti-discrimination bill failed on a 49-50 vote. It would have banned employers from using sexual orientation as a basis for hiring, firing, promotion or compensation.

"This bill would validate a lifestyle that is unacceptable," Majority Leader Sen. Trent Lott, R-Miss said.

"Discrimination because of sexual orientation is very similar to other kinds of discrimination we have prohibited," said Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., the bill's sponsor. "Whether it is based on race, national origin, gender, religion, disability or age, discrimination is wrong and it ought to be prohibited."

The Senate passed the Defense of Marriage Act -- which would define marriage in federal law as a legal union between one man and one woman -- 85-14. The House passed the bill in July, and President Clinton has said he will sign it.

During debate on the Senate floor, supporters called the marriage bill a common-sense response to a lawsuit going to trial today that could lead Hawaii to become the first state to issue marriage licenses to gay couples.

"The traditional family has stood for 5,000 years," Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, said. "Are we so wise today that we are ready to reject 5,000 years of recorded history? I don't think so."

Gay marriage "flies in the face of the thousands of years of experience about the social stability that traditional marriage has afforded civilization," said Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va.

The bill does not bar any state from legalizing gay marriages within its own boundaries. But other states would be freed from having to recognize them as lawful. Homosexual couples would remain ineligible for spousal benefits under the Social Security and Medicare programs or for any other federal benefit now reserved for married couples.

The Senate also voted today on a bill that would ban job discrimination against gays.

Lott denied allegations that the marriage bill was motivated by bigotry against gays.

"This is not prejudiced legislation. It is not mean-spirited or exclusionary," he said. "It is a preemptive measure to make sure that a handful of judges in a single state cannot impose a radical social agenda upon the entire nation."

Student votes count, too Scratch more than our surfaces

In 1988, I was the youngest State Senator in Louisiana. I was so young that on my first day in the chambers, one of the senior Senators, mistaking me for a page, asked me to get him a cup of coffee. "You're a page, aren't you?" he asked me.

"No," I said, "but if you find one, get me some coffee, too." So you know I know what it's like to have people disrespect you because of your age.

I ran for Congress in 1992 and won. I will complete my second term this fall. As one of the youngest members of the 103rd and 104th Congress, my two terms in the House of Representatives have been both exciting and challenging. Today, however, I'm speaking to you in a new capacity. I will not run for reelection this November. Instead, I will be working with the Democratic Party as a National Youth Coordinator. I will be advising the Clinton/Gore '96 campaign on youth issues, and the most effective ways to communicate with young people.

So that you understand why the youth vote is so important to me, I need to tell you a little about my background. I attended Southern University, a Historically Black College in Baton Rouge, La., where I served as Student Government President during my senior year. After graduating from Southern, I decided to run for State Senator at the age of 24. During that election, I went to my alma mater to ask for the students' support — and they gave it to me. I registered 7,000 out of 10,000 total students, and with the help of those students, I won by a close margin of just 215 votes.

I think some students have the feeling that the government and what it does has little to do with them. Well, let me tell you, I've been there, and it matters who you send to the Capital to represent you. It matters a lot. The issues that will be debated in the election and then in the Capitol building and in the White House will affect you personally — I guarantee it.

President Clinton and Vice President Gore will be talking about education, the environment, reproductive rights, the economy, jobs, crime and violence — all of the issues that affect you on your campus. It's time to pay attention.

The youth vote will be crucial in the upcoming election. The candidates know it, and you should, too. Don't squander this opportunity to make your voice heard. As election day approaches, I want you to think about the issues that you care about. It's up to you to choose the candidate who think will serve you best. And then get out there and cast your vote.

Cleo Fields
Congressman (D-Louisiana)
4th Congressional District

"The limits of my language mean the limits of my world." - Ludwig Wittgenstein

Have you ever noticed how powerful language is? Words are insightful to the inner working of the mind, reflecting how they think, mirroring what they believe. Eloquent words can inspire us. Subtle or explicit words can control our very thoughts. Indeed, language has the talent of either liberating our consciousness or disempowering our freedom of expression. Unfortunately, the United States is far from having attained a nation of liberated citizens. The focus of this column is to examine and expose one particular facet of language, specifically the manipulative influence of labels. Hopefully, an examination of our language shall expose certain obstacles and empower us to overcome those hindrances to the harmony we all seek.

Admittedly, labels do serve a function. Labels do enable people to help categorize and perhaps even allow others to better understand their world. However, there exists an inherent danger in the prevailing practice of labeling our world so quickly. Labeling tends to inhibit individuals from experiencing situations, indeed, other people as unique, unparalleled to any person they have previously met.

When entering a new situation, people rely upon their personal theories, their labels for support and guidance. However, these thought patterns circumscribe individuals, acting more like crutches that inevitably cripple those who rely upon them. For example, the endless possibilities of relationships among people are encumbered by constricting labels. Rather than acknowledging new people as invaluable treasures of both experiences and unique perspectives, we strap on a label, overlooking their individuality.

Instead of appreciating the individual, labeling reduces their status by removing their innate individuality, ultimately stripping them of their dignity. Unfortunately, this deduces them into distorted, stereotypical beings.

So, exactly what are these labels that reduce people unto stereotypes I am referring to?

For example, labels such as, "feminazi, nigger, dyke, wetback, faggot, gook, white trash, yuppie, frat-boy, WOP, beanie, treehugger, redneck, slut, hick, retard, stoner, et cetera..." distort our thinking and profane our thoughts. Labels are the prohibition of humanity. Our appreciation of differences is never given the chance to breathe. Truly, labels cause us to limit our horizons of perception. Verily, what a tragic loss for humanity.

Concomitantly, have you ever wondered why such labels as like Caucasian, African-American, Hispanic, Native American and the like are emphasized in this country? Do these labels actually help unify this nation? Or perhaps, are these labels actually indomitable, deceptive tools that separate people? Rather than searching for and emphasizing our commonality, labels direct us to capitalize solely upon supposedly irreconcilable differences, dividing and separating what is not naturally apart. The United States is united only in a prevailing societal consciousness to be separate. Ironically, we are United to be Divided.

So what can we do, today, to commence a successful war upon labels? My proposal is twofold. First, we must employ our knowledge, our wisdom and common sense to expose labels for what they are, -- unfounded distorted versions of inaccurate truths. If labeling can be learned, then it can also be unlearned. And secondly, we simply must draw upon love. Of all of its powers, love allows us to not only tolerate differences but actually freely accept others. And accept them not as "dykes, niggers, homos" but as people, worthy of respect, of justice. These are the foundations that our country should be united in.

Examine your words today. Count how many times you find yourself labeling another or accepting a label given to you. Hopefully, this will empower you to liberate your subconscious thinking towards others, maybe enabling you to expand the horizons of your mind. For after all, the limits of your language are the limits of your world.

Jason E. Wolfe is a weekly columnist. Remember this: While saving the Union, Abraham Lincoln was suffering from a mental illness. But they did not call him mentally ill. They called him Mr. President. No Labels. No Limits.

The life of a five word or less society

Mike Wendling

While walking through a parking lot last week, I spotted a sign of the times. On the back bumper of a rather dilapidated car was a sticker that read: "I love my country — I'm just scared of my government." The sticker made me think — which may or may not have been the intent of the owner of the car — and the result of that thinking is this week's essay on sloganism.

While bumper stickers might not be the downfall of Western civilization, there's something possibly wrong with a culture that values the slogan over the essay and the sound bite over the documentary.

To be fair, I must say that I have my share of quotes and slogans stuck on my walls and inside my head. In many cases, a few brief words can be infinitely more profound and meaningful than a two hour speech. As with most things, terseness is not entirely bad. There's several conditions that should be placed upon slogan usage, however.

A saying, slogan or T-shirt should be an invitation to a conversation. One of the most frustrating things of the bumper sticker example is the inaccessibility of the driver of the car. He or she obviously has some thoughts about government and freedom, and might be worth talking with. But of course, there's no way of doing so. This is an enormous barrier to understanding. Without a person to attach to the slogan, there's no reason to take it very seriously. We might as well assume the owner of the vehicle to be a gun-toting, chain-smoking militia member.

Not only must we be able to communicate with the slogan carrier, but he or she must be willing to communicate with us. This brings to mind another incident. Over the summer, I was sitting in the latest trendy coffee bar in my hometown. A girl walked in wearing a t-shirt that read: "Keep your God out of my crotch". Very interesting, and entirely incomprehensible. So I asked her what it meant. Sensing my journalistic presence — or perhaps just ignoring me — she walked blithely on by and out the door. I fail to understand how someone who wears an inflammatory t-shirt could be so unwilling to voice their more complete opinion on a particular subject. The "I'll let the reader think about it" excuse doesn't hold water, because the reader probably won't.

The solipsism here is evident — people should be interested in me. Unfortunately, when everybody thinks like this, nobody listens to anybody else. Wars have been started in such a fashion.

One should always be aware of the snap judgments people make based on things such as t-shirts. For example, suppose one were to see a sticker that read: "Christian Coalition". Even without knowing the platform of this particular organization, we make several assumptions about the person trumpeting the slogan. The person is conservative. The person is very religious. The person will not get along with the driver of a car having a "Born-again pagan" sticker on the back.

Slogans themselves often sound more important than they are. A slogan should be, at most, only a bit overstated. Lincoln's Gettysburg Address is a classic speech primarily because it was accurate, profound and to the point. Lincoln didn't have to exaggerate the feelings and events at that particular moment in history. Contrast this example with a t-shirt I saw in the cafeteria several weeks ago: "Bowling Green IS Football". I wonder why nobody told me this before I decided to come to school here.

Or how about this slogan, worn by a Kreischer Quad maintenance man: "Real men don't need instructions." I certainly hope nothing on my floor breaks this semester.

By now, even if you agree with me, you may consider the issue to be a trivial matter. But one needs only to step back a bit to see the pervasiveness of sloganism in our society. The media is a prime example. Stories bounce in and out of the public consciousness within days or hours. The most-read newspaper in the nation, USA Today, has achieved this title primarily by shortening and dumbing down its text. Even serious issues like the bombing of Iraq or the debate over affirmative action garner headlines for brief moments before being cast away to back pages. Television and movies increasingly rely on fast motion, quick change and jump cuts, decreasing our attention spans and boosting Ritalin sales.

I'm not such a pessimist to say that all hope is lost, however. I was pleasantly surprised to find 20 or 30 people waiting outside the library before it opened Sunday afternoon. Although no polls were taken, I'm willing to bet that most of them stayed in the library for more than five minutes and read something that was more than one sentence long.

Joanne Bruning, the receptionist for the Office of Student Activities, recently received the Outstanding Classified Staff Member of 1996 Award.

Bruning, who has worked for the University for 25 years, was nominated by her daughter, Lisa Meyer.

"I have witnessed her many acts of commitment to her job, students, UAO and the University over the past 25 years," Meyer said in her nomination letter.

The award is given to a classified staff member for achievement in specific jobs. It is voted on by the members of the classified staff.

For winning, Bruning received $1,000, a reserved parking space and a commemorative plaque.

Bruning said she was honored to receive the award and she is enjoying her parking spot.

Beth Nielsen-Smith, who wrote a recommendation letter for Bruning, said in her letter, "Joanne was always there going above and beyond her call of duty."

Bruning said she enjoyed working closely with the students at the University.

Meyer said when the AIDS Quilt was at the University, Bruning dedicated many of her hours outside of work to volunteer for the cause.

"She has also had guests of the University over for dinner in her home," Meyer said.

Bruning takes care of financial aspects of the office as well as works closely with University Activities Organization.

COLUMBUS -- Graduates of the university ranked by a national publication as Ohio's best also owe more money for their education than anyone else

Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland, ranked 39th among national universities by U.S. News & World Report, was the only Ohio institution ranked in the top 50 in that category in U.S. News also reported that Case graduates owe an average of $26,031 for their education, a debt load higher than that for any other university.

Ohio teen found guilty

Child confesses to murdering foster mother

The Associated Press

TOLEDO - A teen-ager accused of beating his foster mother with an ax and then setting her on fire when she was still alive was found guilty Tuesday on charges of aggravated murder, aggravated arson and aggravated robbery.

Johnny Jordan Jr. showed no emotion when the verdict was read. He was led out of the courtroom in handcuffs.

Jordan said he struck Jeanette Johnson several times in the kitchen of her suburban Springfield Township home.

According to a taped confession played in court, he told police that Johnson was still alive when he set her on fire.

"I was scared she'd tell or something, and I'd end up in jail like I am now. I grabbed the kerosene by the garbage, poured it on her and lit it. She was still alive," Jordan, 16, said in the confession.

Johnson's husband, Charles, found her body on the floor after returning from a department store on Jan. 29.

Johnson accused the Lucas

County Children Services Board, which placed Jordan in the couple's home, of not telling them about the boy's troubled past. The agency denied the allegation but now requires social workers to give foster parents written details about a child's past.

Jordan had pleaded innocent by reason of insanity. He faces life in prison at his sentencing scheduled for Oct. 2.

Three judges heard the two-day trial in Lucas County Common Pleas Court.

Halfway through the confession, members of Johnson's family, who were sitting in the front row, broke down crying. Judge Ruth Ann Franks stopped the trial for half an hour to give them time to regain their composure.

Jordan, who was 15 at the time of the slaying, said he did not know why he killed Johnson, 62.

"She was a nice lady. She never did nothing to me," he said in the confession.

Jordan's lawyer, Richard Meyer, acknowledged that Jordan killed Johnson but said the teen-ager was not responsible for his actions because of his troubled life. Jordan had been in and out of foster homes 19 times between 1991 and 1996.

Meyer on Tuesday asked the judges to dismiss the aggravated murder count. He said a murder charge - which carries a 25-year sentence - was more appropriate. The judges rejected the motion.

Jordan told police in the confession that he was sitting in his room when "I started getting thoughts about killing."

"I went into the kitchen and grabbed the ax near the stove. ... I was standing in the kitchen and was thinking 'Should I do it or shouldn't I do it?'" Jordan said.

Jordan said he moved toward Johnson twice but went back and sat down both times.

"The third time I did it," he said.

Jordan told an officer that he did not intend to kill her but "just knock her out or something. I was going to stuff her in a closet or something, but there was so much blood. I think I need help," Jordan said.

Alleged shooter ready to spend life in prison

The Associated Press

COLUMBUS - A man on trial for allegedly killing four people in a shooting spree said in a jailhouse interview published Tuesday that he is preparing to spend the rest of his life behind bars and joked that "I better start taking my Geritol now."

Jerry Hessler, 38, of Westerville in suburban Columbus, is on trial in Franklin County Common Pleas Court on 12 felony counts, including aggravated murder, for the Nov. 19 spree in the Columbus area and in Ashland that also left two people wounded.

Three of the victims had worked with Hessler before he was fired from Bank One in October 1994. He could face the death penalty if convicted.

Hessler told The Columbus Dispatch that he expected prosecutors to prove their case, but predicted that his defense attorneys will persuade the jury to spare his life. His lawyers have not contested Hessler's guilt but said they will present evidence in an attempt to sway jurors toward a term of life in prison.

"I've joked that it'll be 141 years before I'm eligible for parole and that I better start taking my Geritol now," he said.

His attorneys were stunned when told that their client had spoken with the newspaper.

"I'm shocked," George Luther said. "We've advised him repeatedly to have no contact with anybody, either orally or in writing. Apparently, his mental condition doesn't allow him to absorb this advice."

Testimony continued in the trial Monday. Ashland police officers testified that Hessler was "calm and polite" when they arrested him and offered no resistance.

Patrol Officer David A. Lay testified that Hessler said, "I was taught you can do anything you want to do as long as you accept the consequences."

Hours before his arrest, Hessler allegedly killed former co-workers Brian Stevens and his wife, Tracey, and their 5-month-old daughter, Amanda. A guest in the Stevenses' home, Ruth Carter, was wounded. Then he allegedly went to the residence of his former supervisor, Mark P. Campolito, who was shot and wounded. At a third stop, he is accused of killing P. Thane Griffin, a Worthington businessman.

A list of eight names was found on the floor of the car. It included the names of all of the shooting victims.

"I never thought of it as a hit list," Hessler told the Dispatch. "To me it was a list of names and numbers and addresses."

Argentina on trial

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES - Argentine businessman Jose Siderman says soldiers from Argentina's junta took him from his home, beat him, applied electrical shocks to his genitals and burned him with cigarettes for nearly a week while screaming anti-Semitic insults.

His tormentors finally dumped him on a road with three broken ribs, a crushed testicle and his teeth knocked out, and warned him to leave his home or die.

Siderman fled to America with his wife, leaving behind a flooring business and luxury hotel worth $26.4 million.

Twenty years later, the 85-year-old Siderman appears on the verge of a settlement with Argentina that will pay him millions and avert the first U.S. trial of a foreign government on human rights charges.

Siderman and his attorneys declined to be interviewed. Bruno Ristau, a Washington lawyer representing Argentina, and the Argentine consulate in Los Angeles did not return repeated calls for comment Tuesday.

The New York Times reported the settlement discussions last week, citing anonymous sources.

More than 9,000 Argentines disappeared during the junta's seven-year "dirty war" against dissidents in the 1970s and '80s. Others were tortured and some imprisoned, including the country's current president, Carlos Menem, and his chief legal adviser. The junta collapsed in 1983 and was replaced by a civilian government.

The current Argentine government has not disputed that Siderman was tortured and driven from his home but said his businesses were properly sold to pay debts.

In his lawsuit, Siderman claims that he was targeted because of his wealth. Jews like him were often singled out under the military regime.

"In the cellblocks where Jews were tortured, police and military officials often hung Nazi flags and swastikas, printed the backs of prisoners with swastikas, and forced their prisoners to yell out, 'Heil, Hitler!'" the lawsuit says.

Man molests teen-age girls in vampire game

The Associated Press

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) - A man was convicted of biting and sexually molesting eight teen-age girls as part of a vampire game.

The girls testified that Jon C. Bush taught them a game in which he played the leader of a family of ancient vampires. The girls were told they could become vampires by having sex with him or by letting him "mark" them by biting them hard, usually just below the breasts.

The girls, 13 to 16 when Bush met them, sometimes painted their faces white and their lips and fingernails black for excursions to malls or the oceanfront. Bush often wore snap-on fangs and would walk with his hands

"They wanted to be a member of the club."

Linda Mitchell
defense attorney

folded in an X across his chest.

Defense attorney Linda Mitchell said that the girls made up the story and that some didn't come forward until they saw news reports about the case.

"They wanted to be a member of the club," Mitchell said.

The girls said Bush told them he drained energy from people through sexual contact.

Mourners bombarded by protesters' insults in NY

The Associated Press

NEW YORK - As family members mourned Nadine Lockwood inside a small Harlem church Monday, scores of others gathered outside to angrily denounce them for the death of the 4-year-old authorities said died of starvation.

"Murderer! Murderer!" shouted Monique Swain, 25, of Harlem, as Nadine's father and other family members were escorted out of the Baptist chapel and into a limousine.

Leroy Dickerson, who has not been charged in his daughter's death, lowered and shook his head, saying nothing.

Nadine died last month, weighing 15 1/2 pounds. Her mother, Carla Lockwood, who is in protective custody, did not attend Monday's service. She has been charged with the girl's murder.

Dickerson, who was estranged from his wife and did not live in the family's Manhattan apartment, requested only family and friends be allowed in the church.

About 150 others showed up and remained outside, many of them furious.

"How could you do that to a little girl?" one person yelled.

"That's terrible, just shameful," said another.

A woman who accompanied several of Dickerson's family members replied: "Mind your own business. You don't know the circumstances." She declined to give her name.

Lockwood was charged Friday with three counts of murder: that she intentionally killed Nadine, that she killed her with depraved indifference and that as an adult she recklessly killed a child under age 11.

Nadine was found dead in her mother's squalid apartment on Aug. 31. Lockwood lived there with her seven children. An eighth child was given up for adoption and Lockwood reportedly is now carrying twins.

Hussein regains northern Iraq

The Associated Press

SULAYMANIYAH, Iraq -- Saddam Hussein wasted no time Tuesday in reasserting control of the north of his country after the collapse of a U.S.-declared "safe haven," lifting trade and travel barriers that had stood since the Gulf War.

Saddam's Kurdish allies flaunted their new authority over this northeastern city, parading through the streets and looting the headquarters of their vanquished rivals for trophies -- even toilet seats and light bulbs.

Tens of thousands of Kurds fled Sulaymaniyah for the rugged hills of nearby Iran after the Baghdad-backed Kurdistan Democratic Party rolled into the city on Monday night.

U.N. officials estimated up to 300,000 Kurds might have left, but many refugees started returning home Tuesday, by truck and taxi and on foot, reassured by news that Saddam's troops had not entered the city.

Saddam sought to discourage an exodus, declaring a general amnesty for all Kurds and lifting travel and trade restrictions between Iraq and the northern semi-autonomous Kurdish areas imposed at the end of the 1991 Persian Gulf War.

The full ramifications of the announcement were not immediately clear. But Saddam and his Kurdish allies clearly had effectively eliminated the Kurdish "safe haven," established by U.S.-led forces five years ago.

The recent fighting started Aug. 31, when the Iraqi army and the Kurdistan Democratic Party teamed up to capture Irbil, the de facto Kurdish capital in the north.

U.S. missile strikes against southern Iraq last week seemed to deter the Iraqi army from taking part in further fighting. But with Iraqi forces marching behind the KDP, the faction has easily defeated its Kurdish rival, the Patriotic Union of Kurdistan.

In addition to launching missiles against Iraqi military installations, the U.S. and allied nations expanded the so-called "no-fly zone" in southern Iraq.

Saddam retorted not only by announcing he would no longer honor the no-fly zones but also by ordering his forces to shoot at U.S. and allied aircraft.

Iraq claimed Tuesday it fired three surface-to-air missiles at allied aircraft over the no-fly zone, but no hits were reported. It was the fourth time in five days Iraq has reported shooting at warplanes over the zone.

In Sulaymaniyah, Iraqi troops were nowhere in sight Tuesday as the KDP celebrated its sweeping victory with an impromptu parade. Fighters carrying AK-47 rifles rode through the streets in pickup trucks decorated with yellow flags and streamers. Women and children dressed in yellow -- the party color -- and merchants hastily plastered photocopies of KDP leader Massoud Barzani on their store windows.

About 20 miles northeast of Sulaymaniyah, KDP fighters looted everything they could carry from the headquarters of the Iranian-allied PUK.

Soldiers and villagers towed away air conditioners, wire, pipes -- even light bulbs. One old man stumbled away with three fluorescent light tubes, a large ceramic urn and a toilet seat.

At the nearby two-story villa of PUK leader Jalal Talabani, looters filled trucks with furniture not completely destroyed in a fire. KDP soldiers claimed Talabani ordered the blaze set when it was certain that the town would be overrun.

The KDP also took artillery shells and ammunition from the blackened armory.

U.N. votes anti-nuke tests

The Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS -- The General Assembly voted overwhelmingly Tuesday to endorse a global treaty that would ban all nuclear test blasts.

The action opens the door to signing by U.N. member states. President Clinton is expected to sign the treaty when he visits New York for the General Assembly in two weeks.

"This is a historic moment in the 50-year effort to control nuclear weapons," said Joseph Cirincione, a senior associate with the Henry L. Stimson Center, a Washington-based think tank. "It is critical to stopping the development of new nuclear weapons."

The vote was 158 for the treaty, with three against and five abstaining.

India, which carried out its only test blast in 1974, voted against the agreement and said it would not endorse the treaty, blocking it from becoming law. Libya and Bhutan also voted against the treaty.

"India will never sign this unequal treaty. Not now. Not later," Indian representative Arundhati Ghose told the assembly.

India has said the treaty is flawed because it does not include provisions for disarmament. India also said the major powers could refine their arsenals despite the treaty by using highly advanced tests that did not involve nuclear explosions.

India's rival, Pakistan, said it too would not sign the agreement.

The treaty must be signed and ratified by the 44 nations known to have nuclear weapons capability, including India and Pakistan, to have the force of law.

The five declared nuclear powers -- the United States, Russia, France, Britain and China -- support the Comprehensive Nuclear Test Ban Treaty. The five major nuclear powers have detonated all but one of the 2,045 known test blasts carried out since 1945.

The overwhelming vote in the General Assembly could pressure countries to honor the ban even if they refuse to sign the agreement.

Many countries have expressed the hope that the treaty would be a major move toward nuclear disarmament.

The treaty "should be followed by several serious steps on the road to the elimination of nuclear weapons within an agreed time frame," Egyptian representative Mounir Zahran said.

But delegates from some developing countries joined India in expressing concern that the treaty did not call for disarmament or ban laboratory testing.

India blocked the proposed treaty last month at a Geneva drafting conference.

Death toll rises with water level

Michelle Faul
The Associated Press

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico -- Hurricane Hortense lashed Puerto Rico with punishing winds and torrents of rain Tuesday, killing seven people as it snapped trees and power lines, swelled rivers and collapsed hillsides, sweeping away homes.

Eleven people were spotted floating in their home down the raging Guamaní Canal. Maritime police pursued the house in a boat, trying to rescue the occupants.

Police said the death toll could rise once they reach areas cut off by the storm, which passed directly over southwest Puerto Rico before dawn Tuesday.

Later Tuesday, Hortense skirted along the northeastern coast of the Dominican Republic, which hasn't been hit by a hurricane in nearly 20 years.

The entire north coast of the Dominican Republic was under a hurricane warning, as were the Turks and Caicos islands and the southeastern Bahamas.

Tourists were ordered off beaches and evacuated from oceanside resorts. Authorities at eastern Punta Cana airport canceled 14 flights after clocking 90 mph wind gusts around noon.

There was a 10 percent chance of the hurricane striking West Palm Beach, Fla., the National Hurricane Center in Miami said.

In Puerto Rico, victims included a 2-year-old boy killed in a mudslide in the southwest and two 8- and 13-year-old sisters swept away by flood waters in the southeast. The girls' bodies were found under a bridge. Four family members were still missing.

A 75-year-old man was carried away by floods in the east-central part of the island and a woman was found dead -- presumably of a heart attack -- inside her car in the west-central farming town of Lares. Two unidentified adults drowned in eastern Humacao.

Hortense cut water and electricity to most of Puerto Rico's 3.6 million people. The water supply could be contaminated by rivers overflowing into reservoirs, Scott Stripling of the U.S. National Weather Service in San Juan said.

Hundreds of cars were stranded on highways, which ran like rivers with chest-high water in San Juan, the capital.

A U.S. Navy helicopter and swimmer braved winds gusting to 55 mph to rescue 11 crewmen aboard the freighter Isabella, swamped off the east coast town of Humacao.

Lady golfers ready for Gopher Invite

Vince Guerrieri
The BG News

The women's golf team is riding high after their ninth place finish in the Redbird Classic in Illinois, and view their next tournament, the Gopher Invitational in Minnesota, with optimism.

Last year was a tough year, according to coach Todd Brunsink, with injuries, sickness, and eligibility problems plaguing the team. This year, however, Brunsink is very pleased with the team so far.

Brunsink is especially pleased with the performances of the three freshman members of the team: Missy Hinds, Kate Kolesnik and Shannon Sharp. Brunsink said the freshmen golf players had to adjust to college tournaments. He said college tournaments have more yardage and 36-hole days.

Junior Amy Miller, low scorer for the Falcons in the Redbird Classic, also praised the freshmen, while criticizing her own performance.

"I felt that I could do better," Miller said. "I was not driving well on Sunday."

While Miller wasn't pleased with her long game, captain Shawna Weaver had problems with her short game.

"I played better in the summertime," Weaver said. "I'm hoping to putt better."

The short game was affected by the course in Illinois, which has been regrowing grass in the last year, making for bumpy greens, according to Miller. Sophomore Heidi Hansen likened putting in the Classic to "playing Plinko on The Price Is Right."

The golf team, as well as Coach Brunsink, looks forward to their upcoming tournament in Minnesota, as well as the Lady Falcon Invitational at Creason Golf Course in two weeks.

Brunsink said the Gopher Invitational will be a big adjustment, both in terms of the course, which not as flat as BG natives are accustomed to, and the field of competition, which includes many Big Ten teams. Brunsink is excited for the competition.

"Better scores, better play, and better players bring out the best in players," Brunsink said.

Linksters finish ninth at Redbird

Vince Guerrieri
The BG News

The women's golf team finished ninth at the 54-hole Illinois State Redbird Classic.

Junior Amy Miller led the Lady Falcons on the links with 251 on 54 holes for a finish in a tie for 29th place. Captain Shawna Weaver finished in a tie for 45th place.

Doug Khrenovsky/The BG News

Wendy Watkins (#2) sets another Falcon hitter in BG's five game victory over Wright State.

BG netters escape WСУ

William Sanderson
The BG News

There is something terribly wrong with the south side of Anderson Arena. Tuesday night, neither Wright State's nor Bowling Green's volleyball teams could win a game on that half of the court. Fortunately for the Falcons they were on the north side last.

The Raiders and the Falcons played a thrilling five game match, which BG won by the skin of its' collective teeth. The scoring went: 15-11, 4-15, 15-6, 11-15, and 15-9. The win raises Bowling Green's record to 2-7, while Wright State's drops to 1-8.

BG's strength, as usual was found in the middle. Lori Hilton, and Lori Kemerer provided power for the Falcons. Hilton, a senior, knocked down an incredible 24 kills, and four blocks. Kemerer pounded 18 kills for an average of .429, as well as three blocks. "I thought that we played well tonight," said Hilton. "We played well as a team, people coming off the bench and contributed a lot to the team."

As far as the south side jinx goes Hilton said, "No, if anything it's just superstition, but I don't know. Junior, setter, Wendy Watkins had 50 assists, as well as chipping ten kills, at a .409 average. Left side, Heather Murphy, and defensive specialist, Erin Siebenhar formed the core of the defense, with 16 and 13 digs respectively. On the Raiders' side things, outside hitter Joanna Downie led the team with 22 kills, as well as leading the team in digs with 19. Freshman, setter Michelle Buck led the team in assists with 39 assists. Other key Raiders were: Carrie Monnes with 12 kills and all five Raider blocks, Tosha Johnson, who accounted for ten kills, and 12 digs, and Mollie Schuler, with eight kills and seven digs.

Head coach Steve Opperman commented on Wright State's performance.

"The team played pretty well. Both teams are very evenly matched. I just think that at crucial points in the game we had too many reception errors, and that was the turning point of the match."

Bowling Green head coach Denise Van De Walle, was pleased with BG's intensity. "Offensively our middle were doing a tremendous job. They were very hard to stop, Lori Hilton and Lori Kemerer could not be stopped when we ran something quick.

Despite the win, Van De Walle and company are still struggling with the inexperience factor.

"We show our youth a little bit when teams start scoring strings of points against us," said Van De Walle. "We become tentative, instead of becoming more and more aggressive. We start making safe shots instead of aggressive shots." That youth and inexperience is being put in the hands of the few returning starters, most notably Hilton, Watkins, and Shane Crumley.

There are signs the youth are catching up.

"That was the whole assumption that the seniors and upperclassmen would be the leaders on the floor, and we'd have to bring the freshman up to our playing level," said Hilton. "I think they've done a nice job meeting those expectations." Coach Van De Walle admitted to being relieved to play out the fifth set on the north side.

"That thought entered my head when we crossed. I certainly don't think that has anything to do with that, but it was comical."

Bowling Green will play in the Butler Invitational this weekend, before starting MAC play a week from Friday against Akron.

Correction: In the Friday, September 6 edition of the BG News, we ran a brief about the volleyball team needing a "student trainer". This was a mistake. The position available is "student manager."

Golfers kick off Green Bay at U. of Detroit pounds Philly

Vince Guerrieri
The BG News

The men's golf team will open their season at the University of Detroit Tournament Sept. 16.

is a good way to open the season. It will be a one-day tournament with 36 holes. Coach Brunsink has high goals for this tournament.

"Our goal is to go up there and win the tournament"

Arnie Stapleton
Associated Press

GREEN BAY, Wis. -- Green Bay Packers rapper-receiver Robert Brooks followed his own advice one week after giving President Clinton his debut CD titled "Jump Into The Stands."

Brooks caught five passes for 130 yards and two touchdowns as the Packers routed the dazed and outmatched Philadelphia Eagles 39-13 in the first Monday Night Football game at Lambeau Field in 10 years.

Brooks vaulted himself into the end zone seats packed with delirious denizens decked in green and gold after TD receptions of 25 and 20 yards from Brett Favre, who overcame a rough start to throw three touchdowns.

Dorsey Levens even got into the act, doing his version of the Lambeau Leap after a 1-yard touchdown run in the second quarter.

A Lambeau Field record crowd of 60,666 watched their Packers go 2-0 for the first time since the strike-shortened 1982 season, when they won their first three. Philadelphia fell to 1-1.

Brooks had four catches for 116 yards in the first half as the Packers built an astonishing 30-7 lead at halftime against an Eagles team that thinks it can unseat Dallas as ruler of the NFC East.

Edgar Bennett gained 93 yards on 17 carries and also scored on a 25-yard reception when he grabbed Favre's pass in the flat and rumbled his way into the end zone for a 37-7 lead with six minutes left in the third period.

The blowout capped an exhilarating week in Green Bay, which began with President Clinton visiting the Packers at Lambeau Field on Labor Day.

In two weeks, Favre, who was 17-of-31 for 261 yards, has seven touchdowns and no interceptions as the Packers have outscored their opponents 73-16.

OSU freshman has big debut

The Associated Press

COLUMBUS — Freshmen aren't supposed to do what Michael Wiley did Saturday in eighth-ranked Ohio State's 70-7 blast-off against Rice.

For that matter, no one is supposed to do what Wiley did — score a touchdown each of the three times he touched the football in his first collegiate game.

"Some people are saying it might be a college record. They're not sure," Wiley said. "That's really unbelievable, and I'm really surprised and shocked I could do what I did."

What he did was take a reverse 49 yards for a touchdown in the second quarter, the first time he ever touched the ball at Ohio State. He followed that in the third quarter by catching touchdown passes covering 51 and 60 yards from Joe Germaine.

While the 6-foot, 180-pounder from Spring Valley, Calif., was shocked, many others were not.

Ohio State starting quarterback Stanley Jackson said, "We really weren't surprised. We had watched Mike for a few weeks now. We saw his high school film, and the coaches really talked high about him after the freshman camp. So we knew he had a lot of ability. He just had to go out there and prove it."

In the state quarterfinal playoffs last year, Wiley had a Rice-like performance. He rushed for a school-record 271 yards and two touchdowns, ran a punt back for a touchdown, intercepted a pass, had a sack, forced a fumble and recovered a fumble.

"Nothing Michael does surprises me," said Ed Carberry, his coach at Monte Vista High School. "He's been doing things like that since his Pop Warner League days."

The most difficult part for Ohio State's coaches has been finding a place for Wiley. He starred as an outside linebacker-strong safety on defense as a senior in high school, rushed for more than 1,900 yards and averaged more than 20 yards on punt returns. He even took over at quarterback in one game and ran the option.

When he showed up at Ohio State last month for preseason practice, he spent one day at running back.

Bengals: Carter or Hearst?

Joe Kay
The Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Is Ki-Jana Carter still the Cincinnati Bengals' featured running back? Or, has newcomer Garrison Hearst edged ahead of last year's top overall pick in the draft?

Neither running back knows what's going on. And, based upon what the coaching staff is saying, the Bengals aren't sure, either.

Two games into the season, Carter clearly has lost his standing as the Bengals' premier running back. He is still the starter, but now shares the job with Hearst.

Carter is confused and stunned by his sudden loss of status. Hearst is just trying to figure out what's going on.

Coach Dave Shula isn't offering any answers.

"We want to use both of them," Shula said. "We think they can both make plays. They both showed that at times Sunday."

Neither one performed very well overall during a 27-14 loss Sunday in San Diego. Carter started the game, carried six times for 14 yards in the first half and caught one pass for a 20-yard gain.

Carter jammed his left shoulder in the second half and got just one more carry, finishing with 13 yards on seven attempts. Hearst became the featured back in the second half, also carrying seven times overall for 16 yards.

After two games, Carter has 21 Hearst in here, to give him a chance."

Throughout the preseason, Shula expressed confidence in Carter. The first indication of concern came the day the Bengals claimed Hearst off waivers.

Shula said Monday that Carter has not approached him about his role. Players had the day off

Tuesday and coaches were unavailable for comment.

"He hasn't said anything to me," Shula said. "I anticipated this when Garrison Hearst came in here and before Garrison Hearst got here, that guys were not going to be happy about the number of opportunities they were getting."

"As a competitor, you respect it in them. But they've got to be able to handle it the right way. You just show up to work and do your job."

carries for 27 yards while Hearst has 22 yards on 10 attempts. Neither one has broken a run of more than nine yards.

Neither one knows where they stand in the coaching staff's eyes. The only thing Shula has said definitively this week is that Carter will start Sunday against the New Orleans Saints.

"As far as I know, I'm still going to be in the game," Hearst said. "I've just got to keep learning so I can get more chances in the game."

The Bengals stunned Carter and the rest of the team by claiming Hearst off waivers two days before the final preseason game. At the time, they said Hearst, who makes $2.1 million, would be an insurance policy in case Carter struggles.

It hasn't worked out that way. Hearst is sharing the job with Carter, who missed last season because of reconstructive knee surgery. Carter was taken aback when he sat out most of the second half last Sunday.

"I'm definitely frustrated about not getting the ball," Carter said. "I'm supposed to be the featured back. I was told I'd be carrying the ball at least 15 times. I don't know what the coaches were thinking."

Ramirez leads Tribe to win over Angels

Ken Berger
The Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Manny Ramirez hit a two-out, three-run homer as the Cleveland Indians scored four times in the ninth inning to beat the California Angels 7-5 Tuesday night.

Ramirez came up against Troy Percival (0-2) with runners at second and third and the Indians trailing 5-4. He and drove a 2-1 pitch over the center-field wall for his 28th home run. It also gave him 99 RBIs.

It was the Indians' second straight come-from-behind victory and 18th in their last at-bat this season.

Paul Assenmacher (4-2) got two outs for the victory in relief of Orel Hershisier.

With the Angels leading 5-3, Kenny Lofton led off the ninth with a walk and stole second and third. After Kevin Seitzer struck out, Jim Thome singled Lofton home to cut the California lead to 5-4.

Albert Belle popped out, and Julio Franco followed with a single off Percival's glove and past Rex Hudler at second, putting runners at first and third. Franco advanced to second on a wild pitch.

Ramirez, who struck out three times in the game, atoned with a home run, and his teammates were waiting for him at the plate as he rounded the bases.

Men's netters to open season

Mike Leonard
The BG News

Bowling Green's men's tennis squad will open its season this weekend at home. The Keefe Invitational will be held at the Keefe Tennis courts this Friday, Saturday and Sunday beginning at 11 a.m. Friday.

Even though Falcon head coach Jay Harris has yet to see the Falcons in competition, he is confident that the netters will be ready for this weekend's tournament.

"This is the hardest working team I have ever coached," Harris said. "I thought that with a new coach coming in, they [the players] would be apprehensive. But they jumped right in."

While he said that the players are anxious to get the first game under their collective belts, Harris is placing very little emphasis on this weekend's tournament.

"The fall season is basically a practice season," Harris said. "I'm not going to tell the guys that we have to beat Western Michigan because they're in the MAC."

Western Michigan, Akron and Butler University will also participate in the tournament.

The Falcon team is solid from top to bottom, Harris said. While co-captains Adam Tropp and Ryan Gabel are expected to lead the team, Harris said that no member of the team is a standout.

Harris said that last year's performance has no bearing on this year's outcome.

"If we continue to have good practices and work on the technical aspects of tennis ... we should be a contender for the MAC title," Harris said.

The team will see action next at the Tom Fallon Invitational Sept. 21.

After weathering the Tide, B.G. is ready for the Owls

Scott Brown
The BG News

The bye week was anything but for the Falcon football team.

With a two-week gap between the season opener at Alabama Aug. 31 and the home opener Saturday against Temple, Bowling Green not only worked on some fundamentals but also recuperated from some first-game scrapes.

Quarterback Bob Niemet and inside linebacker Joe O'Neill were two players who were banged up after the Alabama game but should be back at full strength by kick-off Saturday.

"By gametime, I don't think we'll have any casualties or anybody held out for injury," head coach Gary Blackney said.

Receiver Jacque Rogers is another player still a little banged up, according to Blackney, but is expected to play Saturday.

Rogers could start, but whether or not he does he will still see considerable playing time at wideout along with the group of Eric Starks, Terry Loville, Damron Hamilton and Morty Bryce, according to Blackney.

Niemet didn't do any throwing in practice last week, but worked his way back in this week and will be at 100 percent, Blackney said.

"We had contact, we just held some of those guys out," Blackney said. "We tackled and we had inside drill and we got back to some fundamentals and some basics. With a young football team, I wasn't sure how the off week would ducktail into the season."

"Coming off it now, I'd have to say that it was good for this football team."

Secondary will be tested against the Owls

The Temple Owls are a much improved team over the one Bowling Green defeated 37-31 a season ago. Fifteen starters return from that 1-10 team.

Thus far this season, Temple stands 1-1 with a win over Eastern Michigan and a loss to Washington State.

The Owl offense centers around quarterback Henry Burris, who has completed 63 percent (39-of-62) of his passes, averaging 276 yards per game. Temple has scored 62 points so far in 1996.

"This is not just a team that lines up and throws on third down like Alabama was," Blackney said. "I know our third down defense needed a lot of room for improvement [against Alabama], but this is a team that will throw the ball on any down."

"Because of his mobility, within their offensive scheme there is a lot of launch points for Burris."

Special teams solid

One area that Blackney isn't too concerned with after the Alabama game is the special teams unit.

"Except for the blocked field goal, I thought we won the battle of the special teams [against Alabama]," Blackney said. "We didn't win the game, but I was pleased with [Andy] Pollock and the way he punted."

Pollock averaged 47.0 yards per punt against Alabama. Niemet, who doubles as the "pooch" punter, also did a solid job, including downing one kick on the three-yard line.

The only field goal attempt by B.G. was blocked in the opener.

Call me 'Hank'

Damron Hamilton, a junior transfer from the City College of San Francisco, is called "Hank" by many of his teammates.

Soccer team is recharged and ready for opponents

Jim Tocco
The BG News

After a defensive showing in the opener against Memphis that men's soccer coach Mel Mahler called "a collective non-effort," B.G.'s defense returned. And not a moment too late, as the Falcons participated in the UNH Pepsi/Nike Classic last weekend.

"After the Memphis game," coach Mahler said, "the main focus of our training sessions was to play better defense, individually and as a team."

The Falcons shut down opponents Vermont and New Hampshire to the tune of two 1-0 shutouts.

"Both games we did very well. We accomplished what we wanted to defensively."

In the second half, backfielder Brett Strang made a fantastic clear on a ball that had gotten past goalie Scott Vallow.

The defense must be present this weekend, as the Falcons take on Central Connecticut University and George Washington University at Miami University's Kelne Invitational.

Falcons to take on two of the nation's top scorers

The Falcons will have two difficult opponents on their hands this weekend in the CCSU Blue Devils and the GWU Colonials.

Central Connecticut enters the weekend with a 2-2-0 mark, and will play BG in a Saturday afternoon contest.

"They were one game shy of getting to the [NCAA] tournament last year," Mahler said. "They're going to be a quality team with some quality players that we're going to have to find out about."

Speaking of quality players, the Falcons will have to key in on sophomore Paul Wright, who is tied for third in the nation with five goals in CCSU's four contests. He also has a share of eighth place in the nation with his ten points.

George Washington, who is 3-0-0, also have a key player. Freshman phenom Sebastian Rodriguez has four goals and nine points.

"I think he's playing the best soccer he's played since he's been here. He's a guy that has created havoc on the field. They've been double-teaming him, triple-teaming him, and he still can run by people and create chances for us."

Mel Mahler
Men's soccer coach

Klein earns praise

Steve Klein was named the Mid-American Conference's Player of the Week for soccer. The announcement came Tuesday.

Klein has had a part of all three goals BG has scored this year, garnering four points. His two assists have also tied him for second on the all-time list for B.G., leaving him just three shy of the record held by Brian Ferguson (1989-93).

Klein, a team tri-captain, earned All-Mideast, All-Ohio, and All-MAC First-Team selections last year, and he will be in the running for All-America honors this season.

If those accolades aren't enough, the UNH Pepsi/Nike Classic named the Nashville, Tenn. native its Most Valuable

Falcons have had overwhelming tournament success

B.G. is in the middle of the tournament portion of its season, during which it will play three four-team weekend tournaments.

The first of these, B.G. won last weekend. This was only one of a long history of B.G.'s tournament success.

The Brown and Orange have won 18 of the 37 tournaments it has been involved in over the years, placing second eight other times. The Falcons own a total record of 44-21-9.

Scanning the polls

After the preseason ranking of first place by the Ohio Collegiate Soccer Association, the Falcons dropped to third in last week's tabulation.

Jump it

Anyone interested in joining the BGSU mountain biking team can attend an informational meeting tonight at 8 p.m. in the second floor lounge of the University Union. Questions about the team can be directed to Don at Cycle Werks (352-8578).

It's just like old times for the Tribe at the Jake

Ken Berger
The Associated Press

CLEVELAND -- Manny Ramirez stood and admired his game-ending home run, then started rounding the bases, the numbers of traded teammates Eddie Murray and Carlos Baerga etched on his cap.

This might be remembered as the comeback that separated the "new" Indians from the "old" ones.

It has been a season of turmoil for the defending AL champions, from distractions involving Albert Belle's behavior to the trades of Baerga and Murray, who were both instrumental in last year's championship and popular in the clubhouse.

Ramirez, a tremendous talent

at only 24, was one of the players most upset by the departure of his mentors. Ramirez is quiet, but his demeanor said it all. Baerga's No. 9 and Murray's No. 33 have been written in chalky white on his blue Indians cap all summer. He even wears the cap beneath his batting helmet when he hits.

Ramirez hit a two-out, three-run homer off Troy Percival on Tuesday night as the Indians scored four times in the bottom of the ninth to beat the California Angels 7-5. The team gathered at home plate and Jacobs Field erupted in cheers -- just like last year, when Cleveland won 27 times in its last at-bat.

"Last year, comebacks were almost commonplace," manager Mike Hargrove said. "But this one is special. Teams are aware that we have this ability."

It was Cleveland's second straight come-from-behind victory. The night before, the In-

"Last year, comebacks were almost commonplace. But this one is special. Teams are aware that we have this ability."

Mike Hargrove
Indians manager

dians scored three in the eighth -- including two on a sacrifice fly -- to defeat the Angels 4-3. On Sunday night, Nigel Wilson put the Indians ahead of the Seattle Mariners 5-3 with a pinch two-run homer, his first major league hit. Seattle came back to win that game, but clearly a theme has been established.

"We had a little meeting Friday

Laughing and clapping his hands under all the cheers as he rounded the bases, Ramirez may have signified a new beginning for this team, which extended its over Chicago in the AL Central to eight games.

"It is a great feeling," said Ramirez, who increased his season totals to 28 homers and 99 RBIs. "I was joking before the game that I missed my home run swing."

Ramirez has vastly improved his defense in right field, but he has been indifferent at times this season. One day, he could barely bring himself to swing during batting practice. When confronted by one of the coaches, Ramirez explained that he was tired. The day before, he had been given the day off.

Since he keeps to himself, it's only a guess that any of this has to do with the trades.

Baerga and Alvaro Espinoza were sent to the New York Mets on July 29 for Jose Vizcaino and Jeff Kent. Murray, relegated to a part-time role as he chased his 500th home run, was traded to the Baltimore Orioles for left-handed pitcher Kent Mercker.

Murray hit his 500th homer last week, and his presence has been a boost to the Orioles, who caught the White Sox in the wild card race Tuesday night.

Meanwhile, the Indians kept floundering, still boasting the best record in the American League but only 15-13 in their last 28 games before Tuesday night.

Men's netters to open season

Mike Leonard
The BG News

Bowling Green's men's tennis squad will open its season this weekend at home. The Keefe Invitational will be held at the Keefe Tennis courts this Friday, Saturday and Sunday beginning at 11 a.m. Friday.

Even though Falcon head coach Jay Harris has yet to see the Falcons in competition, he is confident that the netters will be ready for this weekend's tournament.

"This is the hardest working team I have ever coached," Harris said. "I thought that with a new coach coming in, they [the players] would be apprehensive. But they jumped right in."

While he said that the players are anxious to get the first game under their collective belts, Harris is placing very little emphasis on this

weekend's tournament.

"The fall season is basically a practice season," Harris said. "I'm not going to tell the guys that we have to beat Western Michigan because they're in the MAC."

Western Michigan, Akron and Butler University will also participate in the tournament.

The Falcon team is solid from top to bottom, Harris said. While co-captains Adam Tropp and Ryan Gabel are expected to lead the team, Harris said that no member of the team is a standout.

Harris said that last year's performance has no bearing on this year's outcome.

"If we continue to have good practices and work on the technical aspects of tennis ... we should be a contender for the MAC title," Harris said.

The team will see action next at the Tom Fallon Invitational Sept. 21.

After weathering the Tide, B.G. is ready for the Owls

Scott Brown
The BG News

The bye week was anything but for the Falcon football team.

With a two-week gap between the season opener at Alabama Aug. 31 and the home opener Saturday against Temple, Bowling Green not only worked on some fundamentals but also recuperated from some first-game scrapes.

Quarterback Bob Niemet and inside linebacker Joe O'Neill were two players who were banged up after the Alabama game but should be back at full strength by kick-off Saturday.

"By gametime, I don't think we'll have any casualties or anybody held out for injury," head coach Gary Blackney said.

Receiver Jacque Rogers is another player still a little banged up, according to Blackney, but is expected to play Saturday.

Rogers could start, but whether or not he does he will still see considerable playing time at wideout along with the group of Eric Starks, Terry Loville, Damron Hamilton and Morty Bryce, according to Blackney.

Niemet didn't do any throwing in practice last week, but worked his way back in this week and will be at 100 percent, Blackney said.

"We had contact, we just held some of those guys out," Blackney said. "We tackled and we had inside drill and we got back to some fundamentals and some basics. With a young football team, I wasn't sure how the off week would ducktail into the season."

"Coming off it now, I'd have to say that it was good for this football team."

Secondary will be tested against the Owls

The Temple Owls are a much improved team over the one Bowling Green defeated 37-31 a season ago. Fifteen starters return from that 1-10 team.

Thus far this season, Temple stands 1-1 with a win over Eastern Michigan and a loss to Washington State.

The Owl offense centers around quarterback Henry Burris, who has completed 63 percent (39-of-62) of his passes, averaging 276 yards per game. Temple has scored 62 points so far in 1996.

"This is not just a team that lines up and throws on third down like Alabama was," Blackney said. "I know our third down defense needed a lot of room for improvement [against Alabama], but this is a team that will throw the ball on any down."

"Because of his mobility, within their offensive scheme there is a lot of launch points for Burris."

Special teams solid

One area that Blackney isn't too concerned with after the Alabama game is the special teams unit.

"Except for the blocked field goal, I thought we won the battle of the special teams [against Alabama]," Blackney said. "We didn't win the game, but I was pleased with [Andy] Pollock and the way he punted."

Pollock averaged 47.0 yards per punt against Alabama. Niemet, who doubles as the "pooch" punter, also did a solid job, including downing one kick on the three-yard line.

The only field goal attempt by B.G. was blocked in the opener.

Call me 'Hank'

Damron Hamilton, a junior transfer from the City College of San Francisco, is called "Hank" by many of his teammates.

Soccer team is recharged and ready for opponents

Jim Tocco
The BG News

After a defensive showing in the opener against Memphis that men's soccer coach Mel Mahler called "a collective non-effort," B.G.'s defense returned. And not a moment too late, as the Falcons participated in the UNH Pepsi/Nike Classic last weekend.

"After the Memphis game," coach Mahler said, "the main focus of our training sessions was to play better defense, individually and as a team."

The Falcons shut down opponents Vermont and New Hampshire to the tune of two 1-0 shutouts.

"Both games we did very well. We accomplished what we wanted to defensively."

In the second half, backfielder Brett Strang made a fantastic clear on a ball that had gotten past goalie Scott Vallow.

The defense must be present this weekend, as the Falcons take on Central Connecticut University and George Washington University at Miami University's Kelne Invitational.

Falcons to take on two of the nation's top scorers

The Falcons will have two difficult opponents on their hands this weekend in the CCSU Blue Devils and the GWU Colonials.

Central Connecticut enters the weekend with a 2-2-0 mark, and will play BG in a Saturday afternoon contest.

"They were one game shy of getting to the [NCAA] tournament last year," Mahler said. "They're going to be a quality team with some quality players that we're going to have to find out about."

Speaking of quality players, the Falcons will have to key in on sophomore Paul Wright, who is tied for third in the nation with five goals in CCSU's four contests. He also has a share of eighth place in the nation with his ten points.

George Washington, who is 3-0-0, also have a key player. Freshman phenom Sebastian Rodriguez has four goals and nine points.

Player for the tourney last weekend.

"I think he's playing the best soccer he's played since he's been here," Mahler said. "He's a guy that has created havoc on the field. They've been double-teaming him, triple-teaming him, and he still can run by people and create chances for us."

Despite the great season, Klein is still less than 100 percent with a nagging knee injury.

Mel Mahler
Men's soccer coach

Klein earns praise

Steve Klein was named the Mid-American Conference's Player of the Week for soccer. The announcement came Tuesday.

Klein has had a part of all three goals BG has scored this year, garnering four points. His two assists have also tied him for second on the all-time list for B.G., leaving him just three shy of the record held by Brian Ferguson (1989-93).

Klein, a team tri-captain, earned All-Mideast, All-Ohio, and All-MAC First-Team selections last year, and he will be in the running for All-America honors this season.

If those accolades aren't enough, the UNH Pepsi/Nike Classic named the Nashville, Tenn. native its Most Valuable

Falcons have had overwhelming tournament success

B.G. is in the middle of the tournament portion of its season, during which it will play three four-team weekend tournaments.

The first of these, B.G. won last weekend. This was only one of a long history of B.G.'s tournament success.

The Brown and Orange have won 18 of the 37 tournaments it has been involved in over the years, placing second eight other times. The Falcons own a total record of 44-21-9.

Scanning the polls

After the preseason ranking of first place by the Ohio Collegiate Soccer Association, the Falcons dropped to third in last week's tabulation.

Jump it

Anyone interested in joining the BGSU mountain biking team can attend an informational meeting tonight at 8 p.m. in the second floor lounge of the University Union. Questions about the team can be directed to Don at Cycle Werks (352-8578).

It's just like old times for the Tribe at the Jake

Ken Berger
The Associated Press

CLEVELAND -- Manny Ramirez stood and admired his game-ending home run, then started rounding the bases, the numbers of traded teammates Eddie Murray and Carlos Baerga etched on his cap.

This might be remembered as the comeback that separated the "new" Indians from the "old" ones.

It has been a season of turmoil for the defending AL champions, from distractions involving Albert Belle's behavior to the trades of Baerga and Murray, who were both instrumental in last year's championship and popular in the clubhouse.

Ramirez, a tremendous talent

at only 24, was one of the players most upset by the departure of his mentors. Ramirez is quiet, but his demeanor said it all. Baerga's No. 9 and Murray's No. 33 have been written in chalky white on his blue Indians cap all summer. He even wears the cap beneath his batting helmet when he hits.

Ramirez hit a two-out, three-run homer off Troy Percival on Tuesday night as the Indians scored four times in the bottom of the ninth to beat the California Angels 7-5. The team gathered at home plate and Jacobs Field erupted in cheers -- just like last year, when Cleveland won 27 times in its last at-bat.

"Last year, comebacks were almost commonplace," manager Mike Hargrove said. "But this

It was Cleveland's second straight come-from-behind victory. The night before, the In-

Mike Hargrove
Indians manager

dians scored three in the eighth -- including two on a sacrifice fly -- to defeat the Angels 4-3. On Sunday night, Nigel Wilson put the Indians ahead of the Seattle Mariners 5-3 with a pinch two-run homer, his first major league hit. Seattle came back to win that game, but clearly a theme has been established.

"We had a little meeting Friday

Laughing and clapping his hands under all the cheers as he rounded the bases, Ramirez may have signified a new beginning for this team, which extended its over Chicago in the AL Central to eight games.

"It is a great feeling," said Ramirez, who increased his season totals to 28 homers and 99 RBIs. "I was joking before the game that I missed my home run swing."

Ramirez has vastly improved his defense in right field, but he has been indifferent at times this season. One day, he could barely bring himself to swing during batting practice. When confronted by one of the coaches, Ramirez explained that he was tired. The day before, he had been given the day off.

Since he keeps to himself, it's only a guess that any of this has to do with the trades.

Baerga and Alvaro Espinoza were sent to the New York Mets on July 29 for Jose Vizcaino and Jeff Kent. Murray, relegated to a part-time role as he chased his 500th home run, was traded to the Baltimore Orioles for left-handed pitcher Kent Mercker.

Murray hit his 500th homer last week, and his presence has been a boost to the Orioles, who caught the White Sox in the wild card race Tuesday night.

Meanwhile, the Indians kept floundering, still boasting the best record in the American League but only 15-13 in their last 28 games before Tuesday night.

Falcon ruggers decimate Wittenberg Univ.

Mike Grim
For the BG News

In rugby, Bowling Green is the team to beat. When teams in this part of the world start feeling their oats, they head up I-75 to find out if the Falcons are still boss. Thus came Wittenberg University to B.G. to find out just how far their own program had improved.

The Falcon ruggers sent Wittenberg home bloodied, though not without honor, after tagging them with 60-5, 38-0, and 17-5 losses.

"They certainly did not come up here expecting to lose," said Falcon coach Roger Mazzarella. "Until we wore them down with our fitness, speed and size late in the first half, Wittenberg gave just as good as they got."

Indeed, for nearly three quarters of the first half, Wittenberg held the vaunted Falcon offense scoreless with a combination of precision kicking, hard nosed tackling, and spirited offensive play.

"I was impressed with the way managed to stop our outside backs," said B.G. captain Tony Mazzarella. "But that leaves holes someplace else on the field and it was only going to be a matter of time before we found them."

Those holes showed up close to the scrum and once scrum half Dan Kelley opened the door with BG's first try, the floodgates were left wide open. Except for two field length weaving, tackle breaking scoring runs by Maz-zarella, all of B.G.'s scores were by the forwards or inside backs.

What started as a tight defensive battle almost instantly became 19-0 in favor of the Falcons at halftime.

In the second half, eight man Jeff McVey rumbled over the goalline twice for scores and recovered an end zone fumble for a third. Hooker Dan Hayes, center Jon Popik, flanker Gary Fike, and fly half Jason King also added second half tries. Wing Paul Tod converted five tries for ten points.

a 17-5 victory. Hooker Steve Rittenour, Center Ray Goings, and wing Keith Bowers got their first career tries and Ward booted a conversion.

Bowling Green, now 5-2, opens its league season at home this Saturday against Ferris State. Game time is scheduled for 1 p.m. at college park.

This is B.G.'s first year in the Michigan Collegiate League after 28 years as a founding member of the Ohio Collegiate League.

"When Miami left earlier this year to go independent, we immediately became concerned that we would only have two league games in a nine week schedule," said Coach Mazzarella.

Courageous Butler fights cancer, but breaks hand

John Nadel
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Having made a triumphant return from cancer, Brett Butler broke his hand while bunting in what could have been the final at-bat of his career.

Almost certainly, it was his last plate appearance of this season.

Butler broke the fifth metacarpal in his left hand in the fourth inning of a 5-4 victory by the Los Angeles Dodgers over the Cincinnati Reds on Tuesday night.

"When I went out his hand was turning blue," Dodgers manager Bill Russell said. "He got hit pretty good. You knew it was bad. I knew he was going to come out once I saw it."

Four days earlier, Butler rejoined the Dodger lineup following more than four months on the sidelines because of a cancerous tonsil.

There was no immediate word on how long Butler will be out this time, but Russell said it's "highly unlikely" the center fielder will play again this year.

Butler, 39, recently told friends and several teammates he will retire after this season. Of course, that could change now. He has shown that once he puts his mind to something, most anything is possible. He went through two operations and 32 radiation treatments before coming back.

"You hear him mention God doing a miracle here," Russell said. "There's probably some mixed emotions. He might be asking, 'Is He trying to tell me something again here?'"

"Hopefully, he'll be sitting next to me on the bench."

Butler squared around to bunt and Giovanni Carrara's inside pitch hit him on his throwing hand. It was ruled a foul ball by plate umpire Bill Hohn because Butler's hand was on the bat when it was struck.

Reds outfielder Eric Davis, who was a teammate of Butler's with the Dodgers in 1992-93, cringed when he heard about the severity of the injury.

"He's been blessed that he's healthy now, and that's the key," Davis said. "He was able to overcome some tremendous odds, so the fact that he's only played in five games is not a negative thing."

"In my eyes, he's won. Even if he came back and played one game, he still won. But on the downside, he's an inspiration to their ballclub and you hate to see a guy go down like that."

Entering Wednesday night's game against the Reds, the Dodgers were tied for first place in the NL West with San Diego and had 18 games remaining in the season, which ends Sept. 29.

"Obviously, it's devastating to us," rookie Dodgers outfielder Todd Hollandsworth said. "It's hard to lose him again like we did before. You hate to see it happen after what Brett's been through."

Butler entered this season with 280 career bunt hits. His career-high is 41 in 1992. He became the first NL player to lead the league in singles four straight seasons (1990-93).

He hit a run-scoring single in the second inning Tuesday night for his first RBI since returning to the lineup. It was in his next at-bat when disaster struck.

"We talked a long time today before the game," said Dodgers second baseman Delino DeShields, in the midst of a slump that has dropped his batting average below .225. "He was doing most of the talking, actually, he was just telling me to keep my head up."

"It's a tough break, man. This isn't like cancer, obviously, but still he's going to be out. It's weird. He busted his tail just to get back. I don't know. ... I don't even know what to say."

Keyshawn will play

Barry Wilner
The Associated Press

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. — It's official, even if it doesn't matter much.

Keyshawn Johnson, the top pick in the NFL draft, gets his first start Sunday when the New York Jets play at Miami. It's something Johnson campaigned for a week ago, but when it was announced Wednesday by coach Rich Kotite, Johnson said it was no big deal.

"It's important that I'm on the field," the wide receiver from Southern California said. "I'm ready for a very busy afternoon."

"I came out and said that I want to play more. He granted me my wish and now it's my turn. When you talk the talk, you've got to walk the walk."

"I don't think because I was named the starter, it will change things dramatically. I always expect to perform well."

Johnson replaces second-year receiver Wayne Chrebet. Through two games, Chrebet leads the team with 11 receptions, nearly twice what anyone else has managed. He had 66 catches as a rookie free agent, and nearly every big play the Jets have had passing in their 0-2 start has involved Chrebet.

"We're friends, teammates, and he wants me to do well and I want him to do well," Chrebet said. "We root for each other when we're on the field."

"I just try to keep plugging away and not worry. They invested a No. 1 pick in the whole draft and all that money, and they're going to use him."

Johnson expressed his displeasure with the way he was used after an opening 31-6 loss at Denver. He rarely played in the first half as the Broncos turned the game into a rout.

In last Sunday's 21-7 loss to Indianapolis, Johnson didn't play the first series, then was on the field the rest of the way. He had five catches for 53 yards, including an 11-yard touchdown.

Matt Fox of Whitehouse Ohio sinks a putt on the par-3 15th hole.

"You've got to play to get better," he said. "You won't get better if you're sitting behind somebody. You get the experience you need out there, on the field."

"All that worrying about starting is over and it's time to get a win."

Kotite said he decided a week ago to start Johnson this week. And he emphasized that Chrebet's role will not be diminished.

"He's ready to handle the whole thing," Kotite said of his prize rookie. "He's done as much as he can to be ready. It's time."

"I expect Wayne to make the same kind of impact he did Sunday," added Kotite, referring to Chrebet's nine catches for 93 yards. "He's a heck of a football player and will continue to play an awful lot."

While Chrebet is a strong short-yardage receiver with the ability to break some plays, Johnson is a game-breaker. He has the speed to get deep, the size to run the toughest routes and the athletic ability to make all kinds of catches.

Oh, yes, he also has all kinds of confidence and enthusiasm.

"When they scouted me, they saw all that and noticed all that," he said. "It's not an act. That's called being a football player."

Jim Tocco
The BG News

Tired of the dawdling pace or the outrageous expense of golf? Are all of your golf clubs wrapped around a tree? Perhaps disc golf is for you.

Disc golf is a faster paced, more professionalized, '90s-style version of the traditional golf game. So centralized is the game that its players have now begun to call the traditional game of golf "ball golf."

Perhaps you used to play a version of frisbee golf in your backyard, taking aim at trees. So many players cherished this childhood sport that the Professional Disc Golf Association was formed. The PDGA oversees all disc golf events, and it insists on being associated with the sport of disc golf, which varies drastically from the disorganized and non-professional recreation of frisbee golf.

Whereas the target in golf is a four-inch hole, and the target in frisbee golf is any various shape or size of tree, the target in disc golf is rather unique. Players aim at a basket three feet in diameter that is about three feet off of the ground. Above this basket is a two foot extension with chains descending from it in the fashion of a maypole. The idea is for the disc to hit the chains and drop into the basket.

Disc golf has its own special PDGA approved discs, which are smaller and heavier than a frisbee, and can be made to twist, bend, tip, and fly much farther.

Professionals -- which the sport does have -- will carry up to 20 discs in their bags. The discs are designed for different purposes: some are "drivers," others "putters." Discs are designed to hook, slice, or fly straight. The proper disc is selected much like the proper club in golf, but perhaps even more carefully.

The sport of disc golf has expanded in the past years. Four hundred fifty-five courses have sprung up around the United States, and there are courses in 11 foreign countries.

Ohio contains 22 of these courses, and Bowling Green's own Carter Park is fortunate enough to host one. The course, which sprawls over most of the northern and western sides of the park, is now two years old.

"It's a nice clean place to play," said Craig Thompson, from Toledo, and an alumnus of Bowling Green. "It's good for the recreational player."

The course was designed by Brent Weinmann, who coordinates an informal league there on Monday nights. The players gather to play every Monday at 6 p.m., for fun only.

"You just show up and you're part of it," said Aaron Estes, who plays in the league along with his two children.

"It's kind of informal," Thompson said. "We just get together, split up, and play a few rounds."

So what is the draw of this sport, beside the fact that you can't break the plastic-rubber discs over your knee like so many long lost putters?

"The best thing about this sports is, it's free," Thompson said. "It's great for college students and families."

"It's great when you don't have three to three and a half hours to spend on a golf course," Estes added. "You can come out here, and in one hour, play. And all of the same challenges of golf you've got here."

Disc golf has all of the elements that a weekend warrior of the '90s looks for: it is fun, relaxing, fast-paced, and it doesn't take much time. And even though disc golf is less frustrating than chasing a little white ball, don't expect to be good right away. The professionals are extremely good at what they do, and just like any sport, success comes slowly.

"When I first started ... I think I hit a bunny rabbit," Thompson said.
